Marijuana enhances our mind in a way that enables us to take a different perspective from 'high up', to see and evaluate our own lives and the lives of others in a privileged way. Maybe this euphoric and elevating feeling of the ability to step outside the box and to look at life's patterns from this high perspective is the inspiration behind the slang term "high" itself.

Find out what all the buzz is about...

The thing I love most about summer in Canada is that we get to put our magazine out at the end of the month and not the middle - which allows us to provide special coverage of events we support and love such as Cannafest in Grand Forks BC on August 10th- 12th featuring Loverboy, Randy Bachman, Trooper, Platinum Blonde and more... and there is the Legends Valley Music Festival and Bio Cup Canada in the Cowichan Valley in Victoria, BC - featuring Body Count, House of Pain, Sloan, The Forgotten Rebels and more... Awesome lineups and awesome places to have a cannabis-friendly concert experience.

We are still missing our beloved Assistant Editor, dear friend and powerful cannabis advocate M.E. Woodside very much here in the hearts of High! Canada Magazine and we know that is not going to change anytime soon. We attended the funeral for M.E. in PEI after the last issue was sent to the printer and it was a heartbreaking journey to get to Charlottetown in time and show our deepest respects to our friend and co-worker. M.E. would want us to continue to educate and inform Canadians about how wonderful this amazing plant is and how it really can change lives.

Recently, while in Vancouver for the very successful Cannabis Life Conference held there - the High! Canada Team had the opportunity to meet with the organizers of an amazing Downtown Vancouver pilot project that helps addicts with opiates and crack cocaine. The project works with the Overdose Prevention Society which focuses on exploring other alternatives to hard drug use, cannabis being one of them. For more info visit them at www.VanCityOverdosePrevention.com. There is a High Society Boat cruise being planned as a fundraiser for this very good cause in Vancouver on Saturday, July 29th - and is being put on by Miss Envy Botanicals, THC and The Healing Centre. All proceeds to the event go to the Vancouver Overdose Prevention Society. Tickets available at www.eventbrite.ca/high-society-boat-cruise-tickets-35806066910

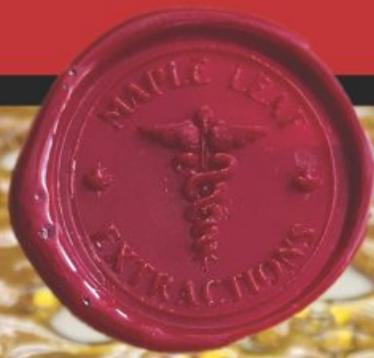

The group also acts to distribute Cannabis and tested Cannabis products to members of this marginalized community to help with pain, sleep and withdrawal symptoms. Research done recently by the BC Centre on Substance Abuse in Vancouver seems to indicate that “using cannabis may enable people to consume less hard drugs - leading researchers to speculate if cannabis could become to all hard drugs what methadone had become to heroin - a legal and safe substitute drug that reduces cravings and other negative impacts of problematic drug use” We will have the complete story next issue.

My name is Colin Bam. I am a striving cannabis entrepreneur, student, and writer.

I started in this industry by creating an edible company that provided healthy alternatives for patients. Our protein bars were featured in Vice's "Toronto's Cannabis Candyland" documentary. I worked as a Budtender at two dispensaries in Toronto. During that time I learned so much about the plant and the people that it helps. I enjoyed meeting the diverse faces of our industry and fell in love with the business of cannabis. Now I provide social media marketing services for brands in the space, including the largest and first marijuana technology company.

In my monthly segment I strive to research and explain how cannabis can be used responsibly to enhance your mental and physical health, relationships, and personal success. I believe that the marijuana plant is a multifaceted miracle substance that needs to be shared and studied.

Because of all these combined benefits I like to refer to cannabis as the "Powerplant"

The cannabis industry in North America is developing at a rapid pace. Marketing and branding are proving to be essential as countless new companies and consumers enter the market. There is a need for brand differentiation and product consistency. This article strives to help these new "potpreneurs" understand the cannabis industry marketing landscape.

It is important to note that the cannabis industry is incredibly unique and diverse. Marketing to a cannabis consumer requires specific knowledge and techniques. Do your research around the history and activism that has allowed these new ventures to exist in 2017. It doesn't hurt to understand the science of cannabis and all of the therapeutic benefits. Customers want companies to be knowledgeable, especially when they are selling psychoactive substances. Be able to explain every aspect of your product and fully stand behind its quality.

Branding is incredibly important to any business in any industry. When it comes to cannabis, you need to be unique to stand out and make a positive first impression. It may not be the best idea to name your company "Mary Jane's". If your company has a generic title it will be impossible for a potential consumer to find and differentiate you online. Popular marijuana puns and symbols are fine; just make sure that you are unique to your sector of the industry.

As legalization is implemented across Canada, there will be more elderly and inexperienced consumers entering the market. Businesses that wish to service this higher-income demographic must draw from luxury marketing in other industries like fashion and wine. Keep your design simple, clean and informative. However, if you decide to create a luxury cannabis brand, don't forget or disrespect the humble grassroots of the cannabis industry. The community can be visceral to anyone who appears inauthentic or pretentious.

The cannabis industry may be unique but it is not immune to the changes in technology and the way we consume content. It is essential to understand that we live in a mobile-first digital world. More than half of the time spent on a mobile device is spent on one of the main social media platforms according to TechCrunch. North Americans are now using their phones for social media more than texting, calling and video-chatting combined. I hope this statistic convinces you that if your canna-business doesn't exist on social media, it doesn't exist - PERIOD. Content is king on all of these digital platforms. Put out content that potential customers want to see, read and share with their friends.

In my experience of operating the marketing for an edible company and a dispensary, a huge portion of our customers came from social media. Instagram specifically allows you to interact with potential clients through relevant hashtags and geo-locations.

Example: You are a dispensary in downtown Toronto. You search #TorontoWeed and interact with all of the individuals posting about cannabis in the area. You realize that one of the posters has a large following and is considered an influencer in the Canadian cannabis industry. You press the three little dots in the top right hand corner of your screen and this opens up a "direct message". You offer the influencer some free product if they want to stop by the store. I recommend not asking for anything in return since 80% of these individuals will post about their experience online anyways. If you have quality product and knowledgeable staff, this influencer now acts as a digital billboard for your business. This can be replicated in several sectors using both hashtags and geotags.

Facebook Ads can be extremely effective and have helped many companies grow. It can be tricky advertising as a cannabis business though. In the Facebook Prohibited Content section it states "ads must not promote the sale or use of... illegal, prescription, or recreational drugs". Even legal cannabis businesses in places like Colorado can't technically advertise on these platforms.

I have found that you can run ads as a canna-business as long as you are careful about the language in the specific

BOTANICALS

TO TREAT THEM ALL
200MG THC

ad. Describe your business in terms that don't use the words marijuana, cannabis, ganja or weed. Sometimes code words such as "herb" and "green" will pass.

Example:

You own a delivery service and want to run a Facebook ad.

DO: "Speedy delivery, 7 days a week, top quality, no hassle"

DON'T: "Marijuana to your door in minutes"

The word marijuana will be flagged and your advertisement will be denied.

Utilizing marijuana websites is a great way to grow your business and increase sales. Weedmaps is a platform that allows you to list as a dispensary, delivery, mail order, or cannabis brand. It is the most widely used platform for locating marijuana in North America. There are several alternatives that can be found with a quick Google search. Cannabis-themed social media websites like Marijuana.com and Massroots allow you to connect to the cannabis community. Kalogia is a professional network that can be explained as the "LinkedIn for the Cannabis Industry". It is a great tool to make potential business connections.

I hope this article was helpful and provided some practical value for those of you entering the cannabis industry. If you have any questions or would like to learn more about cannabis marketing feel free to reach out to me through social media. I am here to help and to learn!

IT'S 4:20 SOMEWHERE

Woodbine Beach, Toronto

By Bruce Ryan - www.cannasystems.ca

It's 4:20 Somewhere

Around our planet, the entire cannabis vibe is going mainstream at a rather remarkable clip. "Medical, recreational & industrial." It's all over the news. Mexico just legalized medical cannabis. Nevada legalized recreational. Washington State legalized industrial hemp (98:0) across the board: no "permit" required. Companies are being formed left, right and centre. Serious investment money is being raised to bring the cannabis industry into the 21st century. Some players are already well on their way.... and others are deep into uncharted territory. (smile) I do, however, suspect many of these investment bankers are smoking their cannabis stocks. Some are investing into very questionable ventures. "Unicorn" valuations, as they are called. Our friends at dankr.ca have a t-shirt: It's 4:20 somewhere. (Wear it with pride!)

INDEED IT IS 4:20> Over the past several months I've heard from thousands of people across the globe: Oregon, Alberta, New York, England, Colorado, New Brunswick, Italy, Columbia, Tennessee, Ireland, Kentucky, New Zealand, Manitoba, Washington, France, British Columbia, Nevada, India, Texas, Canary Islands, Ukraine, Manitoba, New Hampshire, Ontario, Romania, California, Saskatchewan, Paraguay, Germany, Nova Scotia, Australia, Thailand and Croatia... holy cow batman. Did I leave anyone out?

In my little world, most of these folks ARE focused on the farming of industrial cannabis (hemp) crops and/or the many uses of the fibre & core materials. Industrial users are looking for raw materials. In most cases, dual-purpose seed & fibre production would double the return from each acre. Farmers have also started to realize that 'there's CBD in them fields'. That fact alone gets a whole bunch of farmers really, really excited. In other cases, tall stature crops would spur local business w/ bio-materials produced from the surrounding farms. For example: hempcrete is a relatively low-tech approach that produces great returns on LOCAL housing projects. Low-cost walls that are both great insulation and fireproof at the same time. Plus, the walls absorb more CO2 as they age! (see Roman hempcrete buildings circa 1000 AD)

While cannabis has been banned by UN treaties over the past 50+ years, industrial technology has moved forward. Being able to bring modern techniques to this ancient crop is KEY to development across the whole cannabis vibe. In another project, the high technology machinery involved in processing the tough cannabis stalk has attracted the interest of a national textile association. Their interest is in producing high quality textile-grade fibre down on the farm instead of shipping raw bales to a distant hammer mill. Out of the shadows, into the light, as they say.

Now that we can apply current modern high technology to this astounding crop: the watershed moment has arrived. The "Perfect Storm" as I call it. I have been tracking several projects over the past four years:

- Hemp based construction materials
- Plastics from cannabis
- Fuel systems
- 3-D printing techniques
- Carbon-graphene advances
- Cellulose manufacturing

Each one of these projects has the potential to transform several major sectors of industrial manufacturing on a sustainable carbon-negative basis. And I do stress carbon-negative. Using industrial cannabis to produce a wide range of materials sucks CO2 directly from the air; it also stores 30% of the carbon in the soil as root mass and is (generally) bio-degradable. The strategy here is to encourage & develop the cannabis sector on a serious mainstream basis. For example: Ontario produces 3 million acres of corn. Across all of Canada, this year in 2017, only 150 thousand acres of “hemp” are being grown. ONE industrial contract for composite manufacturing fibre would add 10% to that number. Do the math over a thousand companies. Compute the fuel value...Take cellulose manufacturing into the equation.... the list goes on and on. When it comes right down to it, I don't care where the applications come from... I just want to see it happen.

Rather classic “chicken & egg” scenario. We've been working on this for years, well, decades really. I've tried to buy 4,000 one-ton bales from farmers across Canada... not much luck this year or last. Large scale industrial contracts cannot be filled from existing hemp production. The vast majority of hemp farms in Canada (like 99.1%) are growing for the seed only. They burn the stalk or plow it back into the ground. No fibre/core materials are available in contract level quantities. Sufficient dual-purpose crops must be grown and the industrial processing must be in place. Until that moment, cannabis (hemp) can't fill the promise of “25,000” uses we see widely quoted. Once we solve this core scenario, it's 4:20 everywhere.

PS. Our engineers and associates are working on new machines that will transform the processing of cannabis stalk. These will compete with multi-million dollar hammer mills on a de-centralized basis. Change the game. Final testing is being done this month. We want Canada to lead the revolution. Sign on. Buy some hemp stuff. Vote with your dollars.

Stay lifted.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE OF CANNABIS IN CANADA WITH women

GROW

Over the last few years, the Woman Grow organization has been at the forefront in North America cannabis culture - paving the way for literally thousands of women to start and maintain a career in cannabis and inviting women across the USA and Canada to connect and educate; to inspire and empower the next generation of cannabis industry leaders. Meeting across the US and Canada during the first week of every month - Woman Grow welcomes 1500+ women into the cannabis industry in over 35 cities every month.

They do this by creating programs, a sense of community and belonging within the cannabis industry as well as by hosting events for aspiring and current cannabis business executives. Woman Grow was founded in Denver, Colorado as an entity that serves as a catalyst for women to be able to influence and succeed in the US and Canadian cannabis sectors as cannabis prohibition begins to occur on a national level.

THE RELAUNCH

Women Grow recently relaunched on April 6th 2017, with Antuanette Gomez and Melissa Rolston as the Toronto Market Leaders. This is not the first time the two have worked alongside one another in the cannabis industry. When Gomez was nominated to lead the Women Grow Toronto Market, she asked Rolston to co-run it with her. Over the years Rolston and Gomez have learned how to navigate prohibition and support one another whenever faced with either sexism or ageism. This discrimination has fueled their drive and the Women Grow Toronto initiative. Women Grow as a collective, supports diversity in the cannabis industry and cultivates entrepreneurs who are aspiring industry leaders. The Toronto Market aims to protect and assist transitioning “grey market” pioneers into the legal framework and provides start-ups with the essential tools to succeed in the industry which includes helping them access investment funds, legal counsel, expand their networks and much more.

parallels women climbing the corporate ladder face in both our industries. WGT had close to 100 attendees from across Canada ranging from industry executives, to university grads, craft cannabis artisans, and people curious about the new market and industry. The buzz surrounding the Women Grow brand is strong and they were fortunate to have FLARE Magazine cover the media of their launch. WGT mentioned how “[they] would be nothing without [their] team and are very thankful for the incredible women who lend their support and time in order to make the Signature Networking Events (“SNE”) a success.” Women Grow host their SNE’s on the first Thursday of every month

THE GROWTH

The Toronto Market launch was a huge success featuring 3 trailblazing female lawyers, Alice Tseng (Blakes), Arlene Mack (Osler), and Sasha Toten (Minden Gross), who have pivoted their law practice towards the cannabis industry. The discussion surrounded ways to stay within the legal framework of the industry, the skills required to get the job done correctly, and most importantly, the Canada loves WG, and for that they're expanding rapidly! They won't spoil any surprises although the Women Grow Toronto team hope to plan more extravagant events in the following years. Women Grow has set a goal of pushing 1 Million women working in the cannabis industry by 2020. They are not too far from that goal with their 35+ markets around the world, as they aim to create a more diverse and inclusive industry here in Canada.

How did you enter the Cannabis Industry?

I used to be a holistic nutritionist, and while I was in school I loved learning about alternative therapies. When I learned about cannabis I was shocked that there was an existing Medical Marijuana system in place for over 20 years in Canada - that nobody knew about. When I entered the cannabis space I quickly learned that the industry could use some help from millennials, and with that I started consulting. I then started my second brand Pleasure Peaks, that specializes in infused personal lubricants. Thanks to my Women Grow membership, it brought Pleasure Peaks to an international market within one year, and has given me international speaking segments to share my brand.

Challenges you had to overcome?

As an entrepreneur it's really easy to lose yourself in your craft, I'd isolate myself working on my business plan, website, pitch deck etc, not seeing the outside world for weeks and it triggered my depression in many ways. The best way to overcome isolation is to get involved with a local community and reach out to close friends and family. Having a support team around you will bring you even more determination for your goals. Life is all about a balance.

Lessons Learned?

There's no rush in business. Be loyal to your craft. Mentors and Advisory Boards are everything.

Advice to women entering the cannabis industry?

Create a loyal team, you can't do everything yourself. Don't be scared to ask for help in this industry, there are so many people wanting to help you and support your vision. Be original and use your voice, make your presence felt! Never waste time, and only spend time on the things that you truly love.

Melissa Rolston

How did you enter the Cannabis Industry?

I grew up in an interesting environment where I was always surrounded by healers in both the holistic and conventional medical worlds. I started working in the healthcare industry in 2009 and narrowed my focus to medical cannabis in 2013 when I became an executive assistant to a CEO of an LP applicant. Since then, I've been fortunate to work on both sides of the industry in various sectors which have taught me to see the industry from all perspectives providing me with an unbiased approach to my career and patient advocacy.

Challenges you had to overcome?

A huge challenge, which I still face from time to time, is the lack of credibility I receive from some colleagues in the industry due to my age. I'm proud of my accomplishments thus far and am looking forward to many more in the future. The great thing about being a millennial in this new emerging market is the opportunity and ability to grow with it.

Lessons Learned?

Never give up. Persistence and consistency is key. Be un-apologetically you, always.

Advice to women entering the cannabis industry?

As long as your intentions are pure, you're willing to put your foot down and stand your ground when it's necessary you'll thrive in this industry. Having an incredible support team and mentors are crucial when you're being innovative.. Surround yourself with those you trust, and never be afraid to think out ideas with your trusted peers. Great ideas take time to flourish — and all you have is time as the government rolls out new regulations, so use it wisely. This is a compliance and regulated industry so if you're not an expert in either of those surround yourself with those who are. Be sure to hire an incredible lawyer to keep you within the parameters of the law as we move forward with legislation.

The Inaugural 710THE6 event happened on a lovely July weekend just before the 710 Holiday. It can best be described as very laid back, mellow, and easy going. What was the 710THE6, it was a Top Shelf Extract Festival and Cup. There was an indoor and outdoor (covered) marketplace. Indica, Sativa and CBD it was all here. You could sample cannabis infused beer. You could buy all sorts of cannabis products, flower, edibles, and topicals. I was pleasantly surprised to see a few vendors with cannabis themed clothing.

Unbelievably beautiful cannabis art and then everything related to extracts. Different companies showcasing their concentrate products and all the hardware to go with it. What kinds of concentrates you ask; kief, hash, distillate, rosin, wax, CO2 oil, budder and of course shatter.

It was a little off the subway line in the Junction area but then that meant there was free parking. It was a great venue for any kind of weather (it's Toronto you never know....) but the weather Gods were nice and it was a very pleasant weekend. The venue had a sitting area inside and outside with tunes being played all weekend long. Except when they had dabbing competitions at 4:20. It was also wonderful to be able to medicate in the outside seating area with joints if you were not a dabbler. There was also a food truck if you needed some edibles that were not medicated.

For the experts and connoisseurs you could buy judging kits with samples of edibles, shatter, wax, solventless, indica, sativa, topicals and more. Plus each kit came with a swag bag filled with treats and samples as an added bonus. There were other events for the judges and VIP's to attend plus some cool after parties.

You could meet all sorts of interesting people showcasing their love of cannabis thru their products. There was so much to learn and hear about; new cutting edge technology, research, and many thoughts on legalization. At times I felt like I was in a science class there is so much to learn. We are so lucky to have an industry filled with such talent, smarts, enthusiasm and energy. It was amazing how many times you heard the word terpenes as you walked through. It's events like this that help the average consumer become better informed and educated. Who would've known how much the industry has evolved and this was a perfect venue to see how far things have come.

To end it off on the actual 710 Holiday there was an Official 710 Cup After Party at the HOTBOX in Kensington for the Judges and VIP's. The weather cooperated and the patio was filled with enthusiastic, wonderful members of our community. All just dabbing and toking the night away. Then the party moved inside for a dabbing competition. A good time was had by all, the vendors, organizers, judges and participants.

It was wonderful to see so many familiar faces and new ones. I want to thank the organizers for putting on such a professional event and thanks also go to all the volunteers who helped it run so smoothly. Congrats!

IS WEEDON, QUEBEC GOING TO BECOME THE NEW CAPITAL OF CANADIAN CANNABIS?

I grew up in the age of the Free Trade Agreement, when Mr. Mulroney sold Canada away piecemeal to our neighbours to the south. They were a stronger economy, a larger workforce, and, I suppose in the minds of many, a readily available customer for our resources. The USA wanted our oil, our timber, our water, our natural gas, our hydro-electric power, and we needed someone to buy it.

So, we opened the doors, and now, twenty-plus years later, the Canadian landscape – both geographical and socio-political has changed radically. To be honest, we don't live in a Canada I recognize anymore. Quick – try to name one large Canadian-owned business. Tim Hortons? Nope, not anymore. The Hudson's Bay Company? Nope, not anymore. Not even Molson Canadian is Canadian anymore. Globalization has eliminated many industries in Canada, and in an effort to stop the bleeding caused by that loss, we've turned to quick-fix "solutions" like casinos and other tourism-based businesses. Niagara Falls is the perfect example of how Canada has been ravaged by greedy businessmen with no moral compass or regard for the beauty that once was. Sure, they give the economy a quick burst, but it's short-lived and provides no room for growth. An economy that depends on tourism for its main source of income is never going to succeed on the world stage. Just look at any Caribbean island, and ask yourself what they produce, and you'll quickly come to the conclusion that an economy must evolve or die. The Bahamas once provided sugar cane and molasses for most of the world. That was their entire product line. And five-hundred years ago, that sustained them. (Let's not get into the slave-trade bit just now – let's stick to sugar.) But then in the early 1800s, scientists discovered how to extract sugar from beets and over the course of a hundred years, the need to import cane sugar from the Caribbean slowly evaporated.

In Canada, we had mining and the steel industry, and they were the backbone of the Canadian economy. My father, and millions of other fathers, went to work for Algoma Steel, and were told that they would have a job for the rest of their lives. (See also, Atlas Steel, Dofasco, Union Carbide, etc etc etc...) But globalization killed the steel industry, and now towns all over Canada that were once strong economies full of hard-working people have been turned into ghost towns that are little more than living communities where the property values have plummeted and the only businesses in town are retail. Want to buy a house for peanuts? Move to Welland. There's nothing there, mind you, but you can pick up a house there at about a third of what you'd pay in, say, Hamilton.

So, what is a society to do when they no longer really produce anything? Well, they look to other resources. Human resources. People start getting service industry jobs, because people are always going to need coffee and burgers and haircuts and clothes. But how long can that last before we are an entire society of people serving each other coffee?

Twenty years or so ago, Canada thought that call centres were the answer. The Canadian dollar was low, and so the Canadian workforce was attractive to US businesses who could outsource their customer service/telephone sales departments to Canada, and because of the exchange rate, these businesses could afford to pay well. In the early days of the call center boom, you could get a job straight out of high school making $11/hr, back in the days when minimum wage was $6.85/hr. To put that in perspective (and I'm not even going to do the tricky math and factor in rate of inflation) that would mean that these call centre jobs today would be paying $15.55/hr to start. Instead, they are paying minimum wage -- $11.40/hr.

What happened? Well, for one, India happened. A well-educated, English-speaking workforce that US, British and yes, Canadian companies can outsource their labour to, and pay a whopping $2/hr. The Indian workforce is a western capitalist's wet dream. To be honest, it's a wonder there still are any call centres operating in Canada.

So what does any of this have to do with marijuana?

Well, to me, it means that we have an opportunity of a lifetime here. We literally have a chance to learn from past mistakes and do things right. For the first time in decades, Canada has a new industry, and a new product. Instead of building new strip malls, instead of just beating the retail industry to death with yet another big chain store like Target (because we all know how well that turned out), we can do things differently this time. I imagine a world where empty retail big-box stores are converted into greenhouse grow-ops, and where hard-working people can find honest work again.

Canada is poised to become the largest producer of marijuana in the world. Projects like Aurora Sky in Edmonton, and now MYM Nutraceuticals' planned facility in Weedon, Quebec are going to put Canada back on the global stage economically in a way that none of us have seen in our lifetimes. MYM projects that they will be producing over 150,000 kilograms of cannabis per year, with an estimated value of $750,000,000. That's seven hundred and fifty million dollars, and that's just one company. Weedon is about to become to Quebec and marijuana what Dubai is to the Middle East and oil.

Honestly, Canada's future's so bright, I gotta wear shades, and not just because I'm all red-eyed from the amazing sativa I was just able to smoke legally. Cannabis is, pardon the pun, a growth industry, and the foundations are being laid to make sure that it is a sustainable industry.

Yann Lafleur, the President of CannaCanada Inc. says, "CannaCanada's bond with the municipality of Weedon, Quebec will create sustainability that will reflect on the entire industry of cannabis leading to incredible future projects involving many other aspects of the industry. MYM Nutraceuticals will supply us with the necessary resources and tools in order to establish this deed and transmit this heritage."

For the first time in a century, Canada will be at the head of the pack, creating an industry that will surely expand around the globe. We joke that we are known for our maple syrup, and the maple leaf is so Canadian an icon that it's even on our flag. But maple syrup doesn't run our economy anymore. When not even the Hudson's Bay Company is Canadian anymore, the maple leaf is as outdated as wool blankets, coon-skin caps and coureurs de bois.

Now a new leaf presents itself as our future, and with our neighbours to the south becoming less and less relevant as they look to isolationism as a solution to the problems caused by globalization, Canada needs this more than ever. We need something all our own to revitalize our stagnant economy. I celebrate the possibilities that industrialized cannabis brings, but I just hope that we learn from history, and grow this industry for the benefit of the nation, or else we will just end up having the same "where do we go from here?" conversation again in fifty years' time when some greedy cannabis business decides they can cut costs by outsourcing production overseas.

Companies like Aurora, MYM and CannaCanada are leading the way by investing millions creating a new type of infrastructure designed to create sustainability for generations to come. We are living in very exciting times. Here's to a green future.

Reviewed by Toronto Toker for Dankr.ca. Toko Gold Tip – Grape Kush Review

Toko Gold Tip Grape Kush Vape Pen THC Terpenes

Toko Overview:

Toko is a company that produces disposable vape pens, along with refillable and rechargeable ones. All of Toko's products contain THC extracted using a CO2 and ethanol extraction, along with terpenes that have been re-added to enhance the flavour. The Toko Gold Tip worked well, allowing the extract to flow into the chamber providing smooth, flavourful and potent hits. Toko Gold Tip Grape Kush Vape Pen THC Terpenes

Accessing Toko:

The best place to source Toko vape pens is through CannaWorld.ca, who regularly stock all of their products. Registration is open to all Canadians 19+ and is simple to complete. Toko vape pens are available in some dispensaries in Toronto, and are becoming more popular. Stratus Liquid Shatter Weed Concentrate THC terpenes CannaWorld.ca Canna World
Toko Pricing & Selection:

Toko produces a variety of different vape pens, all infused with THC and terpenes. All Toko pens are lab tested, using THC extracted using CO2 and ethanol. Once the THC has been extracted, terpenes are added to the extract to make it more flavourful. Some of the Toko products use non-cannabis derived terpenes, but the majority use live cannabis derived terpenes from the exact same cannabis strain.

The Toko Flave Pen's are disposable, containing 0.5mL of extract, or roughly 0.55g each. These pens use non-cannabis derived terpenes to create their vast array of flavours including Blueberry, Root Beer, and Honey Dew, retailing for $60 each. The Toko Slim's are disposable and contain a 0.4mL cartridge, holding about 0.44g of extracts. They used live cannabis-derived terpenes for flavour in the Slim's, creating the Grape Kush, Pennywise, and Girl Scout Cookies vape pens which retail for $55.

Refillable. Rechargeable. Adjustable Heat.

The Toko Gold is designed to provide a peak vaporization experience with an elegant, luxurious, and sophisticated design. Supercritical CO₂ extract formulated with live Cannabis terpenes for superior flavour and effect.

The Toko Gold Tips are Toko's line of rechargeable and reusable vape pens. Toko is currently putting the final touches on their refill bottles that will soon be available. These bottles will come prepackaging with the concentrate and terpenes already mixed and ready for the vape pen. The Gold Tips use live cannabis derived terpenes from the fresh cannabis plant to flavour the concentrate. The Gold Tips have a 0.5mL cartridge containing 0.55g of concentrate. The Gold Tip on its own retails for $70, and retails for $100, when the adjustable heating Toko battery is included. This allows you to vaporize your concentrate at various incremental temperature settings.

Unique to Toko:

Toko sets themselves apart by creating vape pens that are flavourful, potent and easy to use. Each vape pen has non-cannabis or live cannabis derived terpenes, which create the unique taste profiles of each vape pen. The terpenes are mixed with a THC extract produced from CO2 and ethanol in a closed loop system. This process is very effective in recovering all of the solvent, providing a clean finished concentrate. Once the terpenes have been added to the concentrate, the THC concentration is lab tested at 51-68% depending on the strain. The lab results below is from a previous batch of vape pens and because of that, the percents do not match the packaging.

There are a number of different Toko vape pens to fit what works best for you. The disposable pens are great for people on the go, and the refillable pens allow you to top it up for long-term use. If you purchase the Toko vape battery as well, it will allow you to customize your vaping experience. It has multiple heat settings to vape your cannabis at the precise temperature you prefer. This attention to detail is shown by customizing the user experience, resulting in a great final product.

Gold Tip Grape Kush Smell, Texture, Taste:

When you first receive the Toko Gold Tip it will come packaged in a cardboard container marked with THC, CBD, and CBN percents, all of which have been lab tested. The packaging also notifies you it is a "CO2 extracted cannabis oil processed with food grade alcohol," has a refillable 0.5mL (0.55g) cartridge, the strain name, along with safety and storage tips.

Once you open the packaging you will notice that the amber liquid is quite runny because of the terpenes, this allows it to easily flow into the heating chamber. Through out using the Toko Gold Tip, not once did the cartridge get blocked. Previously, other vape pens will on occasion block the airflow requiring you to heat up the pen until the concentrate vaporizes and airflow is restored.

The cartridge has a slight grapey scent to it, but not one that is strong or distinctly cannabis. If you take a close smell you will be able to distinguish this pen as the Grape Kush tip. The vapor definitely has a noticeable grape flavour; with the terpenes being extracted from the live cannabis plant and being re-added after the THC has been extracted. The flavour is not exactly grape because it uses cannabis terpenes, rather than grape plant terpenes. This results in a flavour that has strong grape notes that trail off into an earthy, sweet cannabis flavour. There are some slight hints of lavender that help relax the patient. This taste is very pleasant and enjoyable, producing medium-large sized vapour clouds. When taking larger drags on the Toko Gold Tip Grape Kush it can provide lung expansion, causing the patient to cough. This will help the effects settle in and usually happens on longer, warmer hits that usually possess a more earthy flavour. The vapor from the Toko Vape Pen Grape Kush leaves a slight dab smell in the air that lingers for a few minutes. This product works really well for discrete sessions.

Gold Tip Grape Kush Effects:

When using the Toko Gold Tip, I noticed that the onset of effects is slightly more delayed (1-2 minutes) than when cannabis is smoked. When the effects do fully settle in it provides a strong, relaxing sensation. With the effects being slightly delayed, it is recommended you take your time when vaping to ensure you don't consume too much. Grape Kush is an indica dominant hybrid that is known for its creeping effects. If you consume too much, the effects can be overpowering and put you to sleep. When consuming an appropriate amount this strain acts more like a hybrid and can even provide uplifting effects. The Toko Gold Tip Grape Kush is a great product to de-stress from a long day and in larger amounts can help you sleep. Medically this strain works well for anxiety, stress, appetite, and insomnia.

Creating Awareness with Michael Mayes

I was scrolling on my LinkedIn one morning, with coffee in hand and came across an interesting commentary. This caught my eye because it had to do with an advocate for medical cannabis and the debate I began to read about online became rather heated. This exemplified some of the stigmas our industry faces today and led me to having a very interesting conversation with Michael Mayes, cannabis licensing consultant and CEO of Quantum 9.

Michael how did you get into the cannabis industry?

I started as an investor in 2009 when cannabis investments were incredibly risky and taboo. Who knew the industry would grow to $6.7B in the United States last year? I went heavy, swung for the fences with a cannabis manufacturing company in Denver and I got lucky. I got in on Apple before Apple made computers. I turned a relatively small investment at the time, $300,000 into a multistate venture including Colorado, Michigan, and Maryland. I took that experience and started Quantum 9 an international cannabis consulting firm.

How did you get involved with working in Germany?

Our consulting practice took off in 2013, and we started recruiting experts in the cannabis industry like Ed Rosenthal Guru of Ganja and Dr. Stephen Goldner formulator of liquid methadone. We began working with state governments to help guide medical cannabis law that favored patient access and patient care. We wrote the Medical Cannabis Kentucky Pediatric bill for Senator Perry Clark. The German Ministry heard we were the "go-to" firm to help understand the repercussion of decisions. For example, we helped them determine that handheld impaired driving breathalyzers were inaccurate. We provided Colorado Department of Transportation data to help the government make an informed decision on the matter. The Germany law is interesting, not only is medical cannabis dispensed in pharmacies but require public insurers to cover the costs like other pharmaceutical prescriptions. Getting free medical cannabis from a pharmacy will destroy the black market.

Tell me about some of the work you do for the International Cannabinoid Research Society (ICRS)?

I have been a member of the International Cannabinoid Research Society for the last four years. The society has an annual conference in which I am headed to this week.

This year the annual conference is in Montreal. I will attend with one of our lead cannabis consultants Ed Rosenthal. We confer with the world's leading cannabinoid researchers to ensure our consulting practice has leading edge information on the most recent cannabis research. The society is a meeting of minds and helps academics and business owners like Quantum 9 to meet and collaborate.

One of the most studied cannabinoids is CBD or Cannabidiol. This therapeutic cannabinoid doesn't elicit the psychoactive feeling typically associated with cannabis. This lack of psychoactive feeling makes it the go-to medication for pediatric patients. In most conservative states, it's hard to get medical marijuana through state legislation. An approach gaining popularity is an initial step for states to implement CBD laws like the pediatric bill we wrote in Kentucky. This allows the state to grow cannabis without psychoactive cannabis being available. Although this decreases the risk from using cannabis for recreational purposes, it also takes many possible medical abilities away from patients, many THC products work for many illnesses and conditions like chronic pain or sleeping disorders.

Michael how are things going in the States with legalization? I noticed you have a great t shirt promoting your latest ideas, specifically "Fuck Jeff Sessions" can you tell me what's going on there?

Many Canadians might not know that the US Attorney General is trying to shut down the medical cannabis industry. His strong views on marijuana could result in the industry taking steps backward. He has openly criticized the industry with this type of rhetoric:

"I realize this may be an unfashionable belief in a time of growing tolerance of drug use. But too many lives are at stake to worry about being fashionable. I reject the idea that America will be a better place if marijuana is sold in every corner store. And I am astonished to hear people suggest that we can solve our heroin crisis by legalizing marijuana - so people can trade one life-wrecking dependency for another that's only slightly less awful. Our nation needs to say once again that using drugs will destroy your life."

To create awareness, we have created a shirt, as shown below, that mirrors many medical cannabis supporters'

Hey Everyone!

We have some sweet and sexy plans for you this month! Happy Sexy Summer Solstice! Summer is finally here and it's getting hot around here, and were not talking about the weather. Thanks to the sun, the summer solstice is charged with bright, vibrant energy. There's a good chance you'll feel livelier and more open to playtime that day — and research even suggests that extra daylight can have mood-boosting effects. You can easily channel that fun-loving energy in the bedroom by ramifying your foreplay.

This month of July is all about Sex, Self Love, and trying new pleasures.

GO ANOTHER ROUND

Put those extra daylight hours to work and enjoy an extended stay in the bedroom. According to research from period-tracking app Eve, sunlight not only positively affects your mood, but your sex drive, too — users reported having 12% more sex in the summer than during any other season.

So, don't be surprised if you're ready for round two (or three, or four) sooner than you think. Oh, and we strongly recommend getting down while the sun is still up, if your schedule permits.

TAKE PLAY OUTSIDE

Truly reaping the full benefits of that summer solstice sunshine means spending time in the great outdoors. I'd recommend a private place over a public one. Having sex on the beach can have mixed results (read: sand goes everywhere), but pitching a tent in a quiet, secluded part of the forest can actually set the mood.

BE SENSUAL WITH CANNABIS

I know summer can be a very chaotic time, cannabis is the perfect remedy to make a mindful choice to romanticize your partner. The key here is to slow things down, enjoying a spliff on the lake together, giving a cannabis infused massage on the beach. Use cannabis as a bonding period and enjoy the moments while bringing your present self. It will make your partner wet!

Have any sex, relationship, or intimacy questions? I'm here to help you out with anything under the belt - send your questions to info@pleasurepeaks.com. Keeping all names confidential, your questions may be in the next article!

WOMAN IN WEED

LUNA TALKS BUDTENDING

High! Canada Magazine got to sit down with budtender, model and cannabis advocate Luna recently to chat.

How did you get into the cannabis industry/ what lead you to become part of the industry?

I first became a budtender through a modeling agency called “ DC Castings”. Drew Catherine, the creator and casting agent contacted me because of my interest in the Cannabis industry

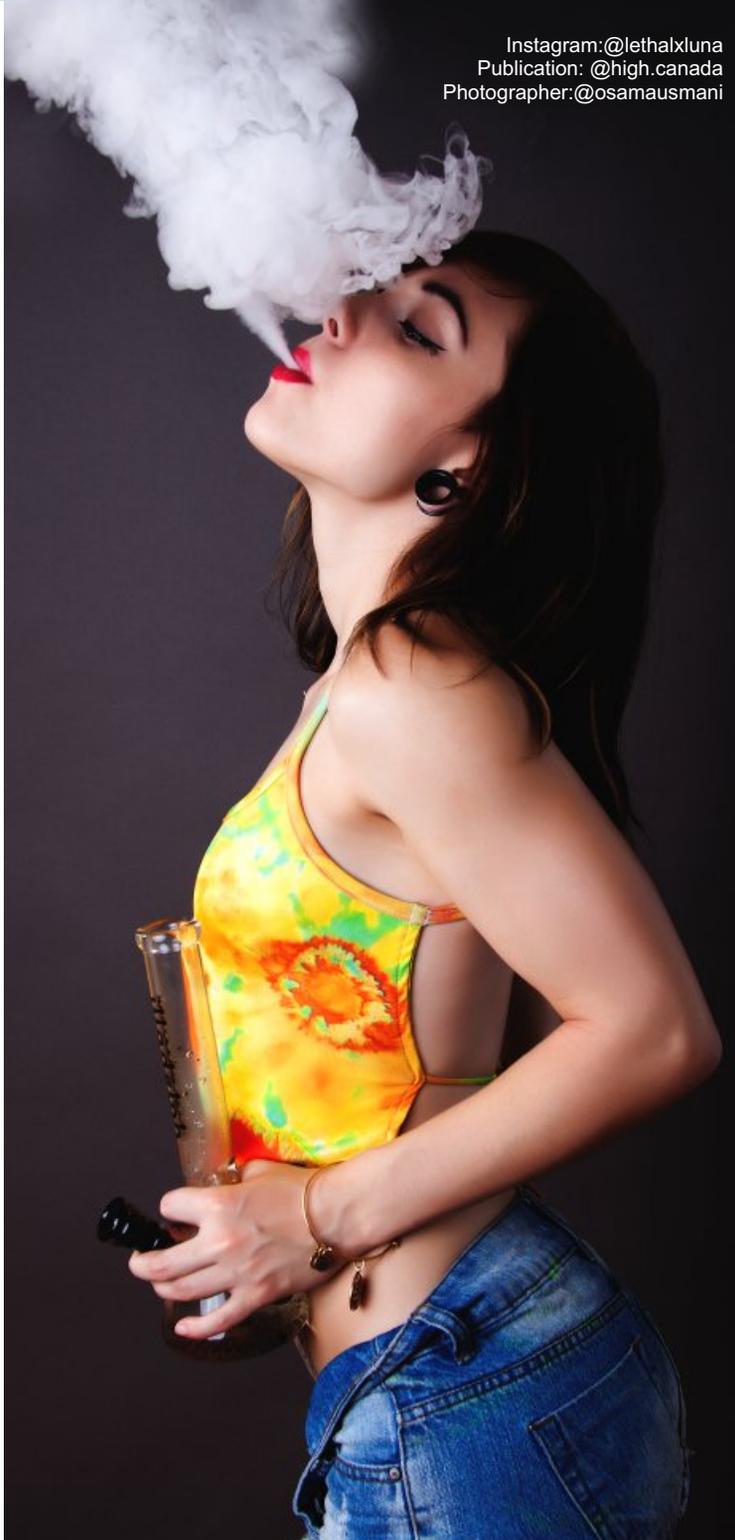

With legalization approaching & more women entering the business, what would you tell others who are interested in becoming more involved with the industry?

With the dynamics of the industry changing from dominantly male to now a mix of females joining, I found researching and staying current really helped when it came to be a budtender. Knowing about products, strains and accessories made sharing this information with the customers was very beneficial. I could create a more educational experience which was beneficial to our customers when it came to choosing the right strain for themselves. Regardless of gender, enter your establishment with confidence and excitement. As tough as every day could be, working at Mother Earth Dispensary brought tips to our attention and complaints to fix. Experiencing such interactions helped the team and myself become a stronger and a more knowledgeable budtender.

With budtending - there are obvious risks and challenges that come with working in dispensaries now, could you tell us some of the ones you may have faced?

Like any job there are risks and challenges that most face at some point or another. Working as a budtender I found it was more the customer interactions than anything else. I found the eagerness of our customers needing their medication created a hostile environment at times which made it difficult to serve others who were a bit more patient. Experiencing such a variety of personalities has made me a better multitasker. I can now better understand of how to serve not only the patient but the eager customers as well.

Sex in the Grass | | Silver Haze in the City

By Teniel Messado

In our modern society built for pillow talk pitches, how does one trim through marketable interactions for meaningful connections?

You wake up in the morning, get ready, feed the dog, stop for pressed juice, and then it's off to the vision of the new generation of work days. Step in and you will see a merging of the days of internships until your next life crisis and an uprising era of business with a millennial cusp mindset. The generational gap in the modern corporate boardroom is shifting towards a bridge of possibilities across the ages. Unified goals and engaging mindsets seem to show that we're not so different after all, across the boardroom, where clear goals and teamwork are pivotal markers for success. When office hours are over and the social gaps of contract and connections are ready to clock in, you light up your strain of choice and prepare to switch your PowerPoint for patio small plates, but the evening is fading quicker than your earlier flower buzz - the transition from marketing to mingling isn't as easy as your shoe change. When you're Lemon OG in the streets and Face Off in the sheets, one thing is for certain: finding the balance between the worlds of connecting and building connections comes with a definite list of difficulties. How does one find the balance to separate business and pleasure and stop the metropolitan habit of the seduction sales pitch?

Leave the one sheet in the wind and lean on your qualities before your qualifications. Identifying with your accomplishments is a great way to engage with your work and show your passion, but there is a line between pitching your personality and pitching your position. Every business opportunity may be a chance to connect with another human on a real level, but every personal connection isn't always the best time to showcase your resume. Most people aren't going to give you their number or say yes to dinner number two because of your plans for a pension, so put down the pitch package and think outside the tie or tights. Who's your favorite musician and why? What's your favorite strain to spark the conversation? Where was the last place you traveled? When are you going to realize that you are more than your job offerings? Engage with your interests and involvements outside of the daily grind and show the world a side of yourself that anyone would sign on to.

HIGH!

Changing time zones and digital dreams help set the tone for cliff notes conversations and engagements that justify the exchange of the best card print of the quarter. There is a responsible aesthetic to this "Netflix and no Chill" approach, where conversations about sexual health can be brought up as directly as morning meetings and unmasked with ease, while communication of wellness needs not apply. However, the art of reading between the lines best left for dissecting your next CV, often leads to the avoidable confusions of "What do breakfast plans mean" or "Why didn't they ask me to stay the night" endings, that can cloud even the most simple seeming adult interactions. There seems to be confusion on practical reasoning being interchangeable with communication skills and desires, while the subtle irony in that isn't lost. Sexual health and wellness are best connected but are not one in the same, just as are maturity and communication skills. Whether you need to be open and honest with a partner or yourself, proper conversation is a healthy part of sexual wellness. This is when it is time to think of you and the other person's wellness as a business. Have you been thinking about your long-term goals or target plans? Are you putting effort into a passion project when your goals were expansion? Maybe you like the idea of contracting projects without long-term commitments. - That is all okay. But like any successful business, you have to let your partner or partners know about your business plan. Keeping any one in the dark about moves in love can easily leave to uncertainty in their position and a need to seek out security, in whatever form, elsewhere.

Here lies the Holy Grail in all of its simplicity. At the root of most all interpersonal confusions, conversations, and conflict - proper communication is key. It's still a part of social ritual to grind up a fine bud and roll it well to share among friends. Oh so easily, conversation flows, work moments are discussed in positive forms, practical considerations can be shared, all while the natural forms of dialogue are as high as the spirits in the circle. Infuse those ideas into your personal encounters and happiness and wellness will follow. Even simple or temporary moments need active communication in order to live up to their full potential. Listening to you partner, in any gravity of the word, will leave you both feeling more heard, comfortable, and on the same page. Do not be afraid to express desired commitment levels, no matter how small or large, talk about your interests, both inside and outside the bedroom, and discuss concerns or curiosities as they arise (like how to better infuse your love life - but more on that later). Open up yourself to different levels of communication and different levels of intimacy will continue to show themselves.

There can be many struggles trying to break the barriers of your own shell, traveling between worlds continuously asking you to describe a different version of yourself in 150 words or less. It's important to remember to focus on connecting and not connections. Take the clear goal setting mindset from the office, leave the projections out of your pillow talk, bud a flowering experience or relationship, and roll one for the road, before your roll in the hay, and take a minute to spark a conversation, because there's nothing sexier than knowing how to communicate what you need.

Hello Hello all you gorgeous souls!!

Hope you've all been enjoying the beautiful summer we've been graced with & are soaking up as much of that sun as possible.

I absolutely love this time of year! People are happier and therefore sexier, mother natures at her prettiest. Fruit is bursting with flavour, baby animals are all around & flowers are in full bloom. How can this not be the best time of the year? From Beaches to Patios to Festivals... What's there not to love about Summer?

This month I want to share a new summertime favorite recipe with you. It's Cold, It's strawberry, it's infused with Cannabis and its fucking amazing!

Strawberry Chantilly

12 servings 299 cal

Infuse butter with 3.5 grams of cannabis flower with a THC potency of 20% for 60 Mg THC servings. Serves 12!

INGREDIENTS:

1 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 cup packed brown sugar
1/2 cup infused butter
1/2 cup chopped walnuts
2 egg whites

- 1) Preheat oven to 300 degrees F (150 degrees C).
- 2) Mix flour, sugar and butter until crumbly. Stir in chopped walnuts
- 3) Press two-thirds of the mixture in the bottom of a 9x13-inch baking dish; the remaining crumble will be used for the topping. Bake in preheated oven for 20 minutes. Cool crust completely.
- 4) In large deep bowl, stir together egg whites, sugar, strawberries, and lemon juice. Whip with electric mixer at high speed for 10 minutes.
- 5) In another mixing bowl, whip whipping cream until stiff and fold into strawberry mixture. Spread over cooled crust. Sprinkle with remaining crumb mixture. Freeze for 6 hours or overnight before serving.
- 6) Enjoy & Sweet Bakings!

Hope you enjoy this recipe and most of all hope all you have an amazing Summer filled with medibles, love, light, laughter & a thousand new memories!

Stay lifted;
XOXX

Cannabis is...

By Kelly Gibson

There are several aspects of my life that are positively affected by Cannabis. It is a crucial tool that helps manage my health, inside and out. I use it to control the symptoms of a chronic illness, Crohn's Disease and other complications. When used daily it controls my appetite, nausea, pain and depression. Without Cannabis my quality of life would be much less and I know this from experience.

Cannabis has its own unique social culture: people with similar challenges, values and behaviors. It's a vibrant network of individuals who openly educate one another about Cannabis and its uses. It can be difficult to maintain normal relationships with healthy individuals. I find I'm accepted more easily in the Cannabis community.

My medical Marijuana journey has provided many opportunities to pursue a career as a writer. Because of the knowledge I've gained about the government system and the plant, I have been able to educate others by writing for several on-line blogs. Having a presence on social media is important to normalize the 'use of Cannabis' and I take it very seriously.

The Cannabis industry allows me to contribute to society by educating others one-on-one also. I work part-time for the local 420 Clinic, which has been a blessing for both the patients and myself. Teaching others about the different strains, making recipes and answering questions of all kinds.

I'm empowered by Cannabis and the ways it affects my life. It allowed me to take a negative situation, like a chronic illness and turned it into a positive one, in a very profound way. To me, Cannabis is everything.

Retail cannabis training

The Lift Retail Cannabis Training (RCT) course provides learners with the comprehensive yet accessible body of knowledge needed to properly educate and serve clients in a retail cannabis environment.

WHY RETAIL CANNABIS TRAINING

Ensuring all retail cannabis staff have developed enough knowledge to effectively serve and educate clients will improve overall retail experience, encourage safe use, and ultimately reduce stigma through the standardization of knowledge and best practices in the retail industry.

The education of retail clients, both medical and recreational, is vital to combat the misinformation and misconceptions about cannabis in both the marketplace and among customers. Retail cannabis employees who are able to employ excellent sales skills, while also helping to develop customers' cannabis literacy will create an accessible and open learning environment, encouraging return visits and loyal customers.

Strainprint™ Technologies Ltd. Announces partnership with Emblem Cannabis Corp. to create a licenced version of the Strainprint Medical Cannabis Research App

Toronto, Wednesday, June 28, 2017 – Strainprint Technologies Ltd. (“Strainprint”) — the leader in cannabis patient and strain efficacy data — is excited to announce the launch of the first ever co-branded version of its revolutionary mobile outcomes-tracking App with Emblem Cannabis Corp. (“Emblem”). This customized edition of the App features all the same great functionality but is enhanced with unique benefits for Emblem patients such as redeemable discounts on Emblem products.

Emblem will use data gathered by the App to better understand customer needs and to adapt production and service offerings accordingly. “Being the first Licensed Producer in Canada to work directly with Strainprint will give us a competitive understanding of real patient efficacy and allow us to meet the evolving needs of our patients, improving their quality of life,” said Maxim Zavet, President of Emblem Cannabis.

“It has been an absolute pleasure to work with the Emblem team, as they share our dedication of using research to improve patient care and increase quality of service,” said Evan Karasick, Chief Product Officer of Strainprint.

Strainprint now offers a turn-key, custom-branded version of its mobile App for licensed cannabis producers, clinics, researchers and government. This enables rapid community building through loyalty engagement and triggered messaging. Sandboxed patient data can be segregated by research requirements to run up to five unique clinical studies at once, which can be reported on independently. All Strainprint versions comply with HIPAA, PIPEDA and PHIPA privacy laws and all patient data remains completely confidential. Moreover, Strainprint can be seamlessly embedded or integrated with most electronic medical records (EMR) or seed2sale software providers.

The Strainprint mobile App is free for patients and is available for both iOS & Android from the Apple iTunes and Google Play Stores respectively. Emblem patients will receive a unique code to activate the additional premium features.

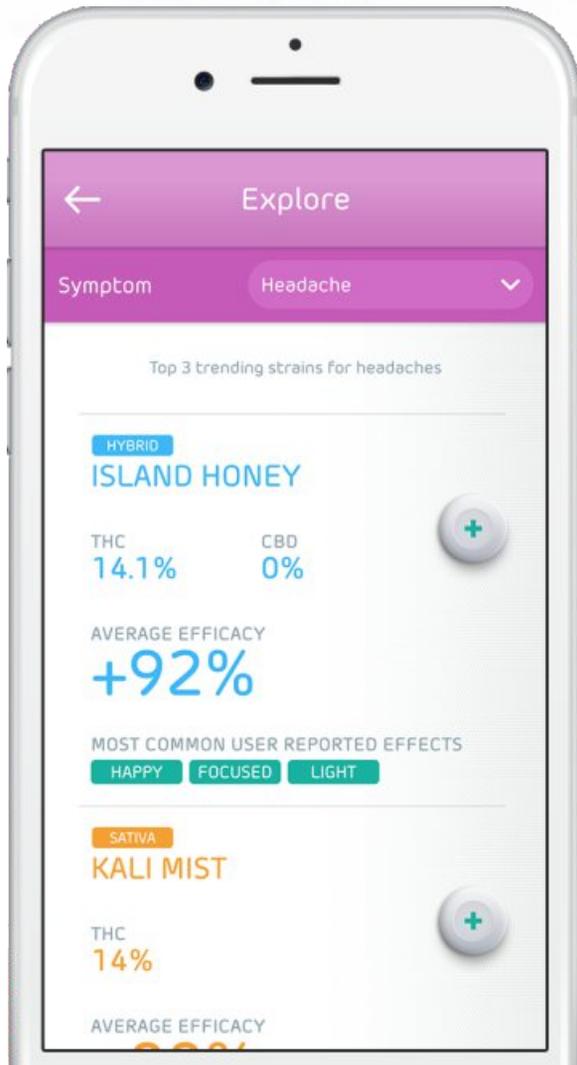

Spotlight on Innovation Strainprint™ Technologies Ltd.

The marijuana industry is full of buzz these days. With the Canadian government's commitment of a recreational market by summer 2018, and Health Canada ramping up approvals for cultivation and grow, there is a lot to be excited about. Certainly, this is good news for commercial licensed producers under the Canadian ACMPR program. In the last 12 months, we have seen the number of licensed producers grow from around 30 to 50 and consumer choice has never been better for medical users. Canada's cannabis industry could reach a value of $22.6 billion over the coming years, according to Deloitte, with a recreational retail market worth up to $8.7 billion.

Obviously forecast growth numbers like the ones proposed by Deloitte have many entrepreneurs from outside the industry looking to get in on the green rush. While most have visions of growing seas of green, others are looking at supportive infrastructure as a way to enter the market. Canada leads the way in terms of medical grade cannabis production using biotechnology approaches and extreme controlled environments to assure consistency, quality and safety for patients. This approach has resulted in the modernization of cannabis growth across the country. Cannabis grown by commercial producers is done with a great deal of automation. Technologies deployed by ACMPR growers track the production of Cannabis from seed-to-sale and track everything from plant height and weight to the amount of fertilizer each plant receives, how much water and what the end yield was. Product is then ordered and fulfilled over the web with licensed producers before it arrives at your door via Canada Post. Canadian's have always been good at building supportive infrastructure.

Many patients are no longer interested in smoking cannabis are looking for new ingestion methods. Innovation and technology certainly play a role here. New vaporizers, atomizers and electronic delivery methods are emerging daily. Today's patients have a lot of choice for how they want to ingest cannabis.

While automation is improving the way, we grow cannabis and the way we ingest cannabis, we still know very little about the plant and the way it works with the human body. Technology companies are developing tools for clinics and doctors but the overall knowledgebase is quite limited. In fact, a large majority of doctors are still uncomfortable prescribing cannabis or endorsing its use because there is little clinical data available. Those patients that are able to obtain a prescription for cannabis are often left to their own devices to figure out what works and what does not for their condition. With over 800 different ACMPR strains grown across Canada selection is even more daunting for patients. Each plant can interact with you in different ways depending on a variety of factors. A Canadian company called Strainprint Technologies (www.strainprint.ca) has taken an innovative approach towards filling this knowledge gap. They have built a free medical cannabis journal for a patient that runs on popular Android and Apple devices.

The application enables patients to track their cannabis treatment as it pertains to over 300 pre-loaded medical conditions. The solution also provides a real-time listing of available Cannabis strains from licensed producers and provides chemical composition data as well. Setting up the software is surprising simple and takes only about a minute. Once patients start using the free application, it provides them with information about what is working for the patient and what is not. Patients can share this data with their physician or healthcare provider for further consultation.

David Berg, is the President and CTO of Strainprint Technologies and has been developing the solution along with his team for the last year and a half, "Strainprint really started off as a passion project for me. All of us at Strainprint are patients that treat for a variety of different reasons and had similar experiences when trying to onboard into the legal system. The reality was that there was really no patient side data available. The research that I did find was very limited in scope and offered little information. The more I looked into it, the more I realized that this data set didn't exist. We set out as a company to change this."

"Strainprint provides real value to patients that are looking to take control of their cannabis related treatments. The company already has thousands of people using the application to use cannabis better and to improve quality of life," said Berg, "we are learning about the way cannabis interacts with the human body based on gender, age range, medical condition, symptom, strain, symptom and its relative effectiveness." Strainprint's goal is to become the world's largest longitudinal study on cannabis. This data will help improve doctor knowledge, patient knowledge and also provide advanced understanding for future research.

The company provides customers with a HIPPA, PIPEDA and PHIPA compliant solution and all data is stored in Canada. "We are very serious about the protection of our patient data and take every measure possible to provide this protection," explains Berg, "all of our data is fully anonymized for analysis and our goal is to drive research." The company provides a version of its software for researchers and commercial producers that will enable them to run research studies with clients. David explains, "We have built a turn-key cannabis research platform that also provides huge value for patients; it is fully customizable and even has a built-in loyalty program to reward patients for interacting with the system." Strainprint has plans to deliver a clinical research solution later this summer that will provide researchers with a view into the anonymous trend data.

Strainprint is one of many next generation innovations for the growing cannabis industry. With an estimated 4 million recreational patients' coming online in 2018 there will be lots of room for innovation and growth in an exciting new Canadian led industry.

Help Jayda Live Life To The Fullest!

Craig Ex, Expert Joints, met Jayda outside of the Westin Bayshore on Saturday at the Cannabis Life Conference, where she was selling lemonade to raise money for the treatment of her rare brain disease known as Vanishing White Matter Disease (according to her gofundme page, there are about 200 documented cases worldwide, but no cure and life expectancy is 2-10 years for someone with it). Her brother suggested cannabis might help with her treatment & suggested Jayda and her mom, Linda, check out the Cannabis Life Conference to gather information regarding possible treatment options using cannabis. Shortly after setting up their lemonade stand, word about Jayda's story spread, and conference emcee Craig Ex, Expert Joints, went outside to introduce himself.

After learning more about Jayda's battle, Craig invited Jayda and Linda to speak on stage at the Cannabis Life Conference, in front of a room full of attendees (and to the world via the live stream on @CannaLifeNet) This also gave them the chance to connect with medical experts on-site to answer their questions. Jayda came on stage and shared her story, and while she spoke a donation cup was passed around the audience.

Jayda and Linda connected with multiple medical professionals and industry experts at the conference who have offered consultations and products for Jayda at no charge (Mara Gordon from Aunt Zeld's, Inc., Green Island Naturals, MediGreen, Top Leaf Canada, Canna Kids & The Medical Cannabis Dispensary).

$1600 cash was collected on the floor from generous conference attendees, speakers, and exhibitors. Cambridge House International, the conference producers, then matched this amount as did Top Leaf Canada bringing the total to $6400! The donations will go towards Jayda's treatment and ongoing care, as well as a new car (The air conditioning in their old car doesn't work and Jayda struggles with heat). The Medical Cannabis Society Dispensary are also treating Jayda and her family to a night in a hotel with a pool (a wish of Jayda's), complete with a limo ride. Jayda's mom Linda said "for the first time, I feel there is hope and someone has listened".

Jayda's goal is to raise 2.3 million dollars for research regarding her illness.

Check out the video from Cannabis Life Conference to hear more of Jayda's story.

Donations can be made to Jayda's GoFundMe page, Help Jayda Live Life To The Fullest!

THE CANNABIS SEED PEOPLE

High! Canada Magazine was privy recently to a Pharaoh's treasure chest and sampled some of Rasta Pharaoh's best products.

This month we had the opportunity to sample some new products that are just finishing up their development and testing - First we tried out Rasta Pharaoh's new pain cream and found it to be extremely effective on back and muscle pain. It had solid professional packaging as well as a great scent and consistency as well. We were also very happy to try out Rasta Pharaoh's new brand of Cannabis Shisha which literally knocked out socks off at a recent shisha session. Shisha courtesy of Shisha Plus.

Rasta Pharaoh extractions main principle is to provide the ACMPR/MMPR community with premium quality marijuana extracts and edibles. Founded in 2017, Rasta Pharaoh has been developing products within all of the GMP protocols which separates them from other concentrate companies.

Their products range from their penetrating, warming & soothing massage oils, therapeutic bath soaks & salves, concentrate infused teas & drinks and unflavored e-juices. Rasta Pharaoh's love for the culinary arts drives them to challenge themselves to create the highest quality of products to ensure their giving the best to their patients and to continue to pour their heart and soul in quality efficiency.

Gemini
Summer love is in the air. Enjoy what you have while its here. Try stepping out of your comfort zone this month; you may be more impressed than disappointed.

Cancer
Pack your bags and hit the road. Adventures and fun are on the way. Make sure to keep a healthy balance but overall let loose and have the fun you've been waiting for.

Leo
There is a light at the end of the tunnel and you're just about there. Hit a bowl and brace yourself for this next chapter, you won't be finding any dull moments.

Virgo
Let go of everything holding you back. You are breaking out of your cocoon and turning into a beautiful butterfly. Spread your wings and fly. Remember you will always land where you need to be.

Libra
New work opportunity is sailing right by you. Make sure to hop on board when the time is right. Don't let it sail away.

Aries
The temperature is rising and so are you this month. Don't stop until you reach your goal. Remember slow and steady wins the race.

Taurus
Spark up that joint because sparks are flying for you. Your energy this month is electric and everyone can see it. Use your down time to create a more free flowing schedule for yourself.

Scorpio

You've been making big decisions lately. Take a pause and ensure you're going in the right direction. Remember a little goes a long way.

Sagittarius

When things go up they must come down. Don't get too hung up on the negatives the brightest rainbows shine after the harshest storms.

Capricorn

You get to have your cake and eat it too this month. Financial gains are on the way. Spoil yourself and your loved ones; it won't go unnoticed.

Aquarius

Stick to what you know best this month. Don't doubt your capabilities, you will see the results in due time.

Pisces

Embrace the changes happening around you. It is time for growth and you are only beginning your spiritual journey. Hold on tight and enjoy the ride.

FINALLY! A Brain-Dead-Simple Nutrient Growing System* That Does All Your pH Balancing And Adjusting Work for You - Automatically - Making it Easy For You To Get Maximum Results, Consistently, No Matter What Your Skill Level!

As growers, we all want to get the most production out of our grow room, maximize our yields ... and ... do it consistently, harvest after harvest ...

That's why you're going to want to pay close attention to the Bigger Yields pH-Perfect™ Bundle Boxes System™ from Advanced Nutrients. Here's what makes these bundles so special:

- NEVER WORRY ABOUT YOUR pH! The formulations contain a proprietary "smart" release of acid and alkaline molecules, called pH-Perfect™, which corrects your pH to optimum levels automatically in your reservoir and keeps it there. Never again fool with pH pens, meters or corrosive pH up, pH down or balance your pH ever again! The cations and anions are perfectly balanced for the types of plants you're growing!

- BUNDLES TO MATCH YOUR SKILL LEVEL! No matter how much experience you have, there's a bundle made for you. Choose from the Hobbyist Level, Expert Grower Level, Professional Grower Level, or Grand Master Grower.

- ALL-IN-ONE SOLUTION! Each bundle comes with all the supplements you need whether growing hydroponics or soil. Most of the products are 2-in-1, even 5-in-1 solutions saving you hassles and money (when you buy a bundle box you get one of the nutrients in the box free!) ... while at the same time ... giving your plants the exact macro and micronutrients they must have for superior plant growth.

- NO GUESSWORK! The simple feeding chart provided with each of the bundles has been perfected to give your crops optimal nutrient levels and ratios for maximized yields every time. It makes it incredibly simple to mix: all base nutrients mix at 4ml's per liter and all supplements are a scant 2ml's per liter.

- AS SIMPLE AS IT GETS! Just select your skill level bundle, follow the simple mixing instructions and feeding chart, let the pH-Perfect™ Technology auto-correct your pH and get ready for a harvest that you can be proud of!
